3. Future plans

The section plans...

- To edit a handbook on the “History of Mass Media in Europe”. One major long-term activity of the section is a handbook project on the history of mass communication in Europe. It is not intended to assemble several parallel national media histories. Instead the focus will be on certain problems or historical situations all European countries had to face in order to come to an integrated and transnational communication history of Europe. To organize this major project an additional meeting or workshop is planned for 2013.
- To co-sponsor the preconference “New Histories of Communication Study” at the ICA Conference in London on June, 16-17, 2013. The preconference seeks to broaden, internationalize, and advance the history of communication study by bringing together scholars from ECREA, ICA and IAMCR.
- To organize the section’s next workshop. It will take place in early September 2013 in Lisbon in cooperation with the Catholic University of Portugal. The theme will be “Transition” which can be studied from manifold perspectives such as, but not limited to, technological, political, cultural, economic and societal changes. In particular, media change shall be analyzed as a common European phenomenon. The call for papers will be launched in January 2013.
